After the recent purge of the Yugoslav Foreign Office, almost all of the non-party members were dismissed. Certainly all of the non-party members who remain in the Foreign Office and who have pro-British or US leanings are very eager to impress everybody that they do not have such feelings, being completely aware that they would not only lose their jobs but suffer the consequences if the truth were known.

Some of the pro-US-British individuals in the Foreign Office are:

- (1) Director of the Historical Department, Professor Jovanovic, who will not jeopardize his position until he is completely sure of the success of Great Britain and the US. He was in the US during World War I. He is a friend of Elmer Davis; is very well read, educated, shrewd, and loves to work. He is politically of no consequence in Yugoslavia today. He is a bachelor.
- (2) In the same Department is Counsellor Dr Jovanovic, who recently was recalled from Portugal where he was Charge d'Affaires. He is a career diplomat; democratic in his leanings. His recall from Portugal to the Historical Department (dead-letter office) means he will be dismissed soon. This will upset him because he supported the partisans during the war. He is fully aware that he will be dismissed and that, in spite of his age (about 35), he will receive no pension, but will be compelled to seek a new job where the salary will be without regard to his former position. Contacting him at present might be unwise, as he might exploit the contact to prove his loyalty and avoid dismissal. He is a bachelor.

The remaining non-party members, who are also in the Historical Department, wouldn't be approachable. Counsellor Milosavljevic would be approachable, but he has a large family in Yugoslavia. There is no one of importance in the Legal Department.
